Luxury Home Plans
Potter Style
Edited by Nina
Tassler, the chairman of CBS Entertainment,

a collection of original essays from notable,
highly accomplished
women in politics,
academia, athletics, the
arts, and business
offering advice for raising a new generation of
empowered girls.
Young women are
bombarded these days
with advice from every direction telling them
to lean in, marry smart, thrive, or not even to try to have it all. So where to begin? And whom should they listen to? Nina Tassler is, by any standard, a trailblazer. She holds one of the highest
positions at CBS Corp., one of the world's most prominent media
companies; she serves on the boards of
prominent institutions;
and she's a devoted wife and mother. It's hard to imagine a

better role model for a young woman. But while attending a
volleyball tournament
with her daughter,
Nina was forced to face
her own limitations.
Olympic gold medalist
Misty May-Treanor
was scheduled to speak
and the girls were all so excited to hear what
say—not just as an icon of the sport that they all loved, but as a woman. Nina realized that the absence of
sports from her own
girlhood meant that she didn't always know
how to talk to her daughter about what it means to be a female
athlete, or about how women could succeed
in the often male-
dominated field of sports. Nina realized that her perspective on what feminism
means—on what being a woman means—is singular, and informed by her own journey...and that perhaps other women—other mothers—had their own unique ways of talking about these issues with their own girls. And so What I Told My Daughter was born: a kaleidoscope of talented, successful women from all walks of life—from celebrities to business executives, academics to law enforcement to philanthropic and humanitarian leaders including Geena Davis, Brooke Shields, Norah O'Donnell, First Lady Laura Bush, Pat Benatar, Gloria Estefan, Christine Baranski, Sheila Bair, Peggy Orenstein, and Gloria Allred—share anecdotes about the stories they've told their own daughters to instill in them the belief that they are capable of doing whatever they set their mind to, and that even as they struggle to find their own way, they are far from alone.

The Estate House Re-designed HarperCollins

Today, there is a tremendous mismatch between the available housing stock in the US and the housing options that people want and need. The post-WWII, auto-centric, single-family-development model no longer meets the needs of residents. Urban areas in the US are experiencing dramatically shifting household and cultural demographics and a growing demand for walkable urban living. Missing Middle Housing, a term coined by Daniel Parolek, describes the walkable, desirable, yet attainable housing that many people across the country are struggling to find. Missing Middle Housing types—such as duplexes, fourplexes, and bungalow courts—can provide options along a spectrum of affordability. In Missing Middle Housing, Parolek, an architect and urban designer, illustrates the power of these housing types to meet today's diverse housing needs. With the benefit of beautiful full-color graphics, Parolek goes into depth about the benefits and qualities of Missing Middle Housing. The book demonstrates why more developers should be building Missing Middle Housing and defines the barriers cities need to remove to enable it to be built. Case studies of built projects show what is possible, from the Prairie Queen Neighborhood in Omaha, Nebraska to the Sonoma Wildfire Cottages, in California. A chapter from urban scholar Arthur C. Nelson uses data analysis to highlight the urgency to deliver Missing Middle Housing. Parolek proves that density is too blunt of an instrument to effectively regulate for twenty-first-century housing needs. Complete industries and systems will have to be rethought to help deliver the broad range of Missing Middle Housing needed to meet the demand, as this book shows. Whether you are a planner, architect, builder, or city leader, Missing Middle Housing will help you think differently about how to address housing needs for today's communities.
